City Council Polishes Up Policy Statements on School, Greenbriar

by Sandra Barnes

At its January 19 meeting the city council concerned itself with polishing up two statements. The first statement concerned the city's position on the Greenbriar pumping station and is to be sent to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission; the second concerned the boundary changes for the Eleanor Roosevelt High School and will be presented at the January 22 public hearing to be held by the school board.

The first statement notes that the developers of Greenbriar have requested that the WSSC not construct a pumping station estimated to cost $768,065 or more, for which the developer earlier agreed to pay 75% of the cost. Instead, the city suggests that Greenbriar's existing pumping station be continued in operation.

Council reasoned that a decision in this matter should, first, serve the public interest and, second, the best interest of present and future residents of Greenbriar. Council expressed dissatisfaction with both the construction of a new facility, which is very expensive and which would replace an existing facility that appears to be suitable. At the same time, it expressed concern for the Greenbriar residents being saddled with the permanent expense of maintaining a private pumping station. WSSC is urged to explore a compromise solution in which the existing facility would be modified at the developer's expense and permanently operated as part of the WSSC system.

School Controversy

As for the Eleanor Roosevelt High School, council's statement reflects the thoughts of the citizens' committee and many Greenbelt residents in objecting to the various new proposals that might result in a delay in the opening of the school, will cost more money than the board has funds for, might result in the tipping of the racial balance in some schools, and might fail to provide a full educational program for the Greenbelt children who will attend.

Further, council expressed fear that the school will become a haven for those malcontented students who are perennially dissatisfied with the school situation. All in all council envisioned a multitude of problems occurring if the open enrollment resolution were passed by the board. Council praised the idea of developing the new school into a technical school along the lines of the famed Bronx School of Science, but cautioned that this type of school takes years of careful planning and research, none of which has gone into the Eleanor Roosevelt school as yet.

Open Gym

Councilman Richard Castaldi asked the city manager, James Giese, if he was aware of the problem of non-residents coming to the Greenbelt recreation centers, particularly the one in Springhill Lake, and using the free facilities. Giese replied that both he and the recreation director were aware of this problem and were working on a solution. All of council affirmed the regulation that the gyms were to be used by residents only (and possibly a limited number of their guests). Also, on nights designated for use by one particular group e.g. ladies, men were not supposed to use the facilities, nor were adult residents to push out the teenagers when the teens were scheduled to use the gym.

Pool Turning Wall

Members of the Aquatic Booster's Club appeared before council concerning the plans for the construction of a turning wall at the swimming pool. At the time council adopted its budget for this fiscal year, revenue sharing funds were allocated for the turning wall and for the reducing the depth in the shallow end of the pool. However, council has not proceeded on the matter because little study has been given to the project and the city manager doubts that the revenue sharing funds will be such that the city will be financially able to construct the wall. The city's engineers estimated the cost to be about $7500.

Although the city manager doubted that there was enough time for the study, bidding, and construction of the turning wall before the opening of the pool on May 30, even if funds became available, he noted an alternative to the permanent wall — a movable floating wall constructed of aluminum.

Members of the swim team present were not favorably disposed to the floating wall and informed council of a permanent wall built by the Silver Spring YMCA for $1000 and constructed in a one-week period. They felt a similar feat could be accomplished by the city if it were so disposed. Council asked the manager to seek further information.

APB Reports

Council accepted two reports from the Advisory Planning Board (APB). One concerned the preliminary plan of subdivision for the Glen Ora apartments and the other on subdivision of the Golden Triangle. Both will become topics for discussion at the next council meeting.

Appointments

The following were appointed to the various city boards: APB — Jean Verbos; Park and Recreation Advisory Board — Fred Ford; Bicentennial — Alice Plaster and May Raichelle; Community Relations — Rick Ransom; COG Human Relations Committee — Tony Hausner; COG Health and Environment Committee — Bernard Kessler.

Police Blotter

Two breaking and enterings into private residences were reported. One offense in Greenbriar resulted in a considerable loss of property, while one in University Square resulted in no theft. Additionally, one attempted burglary on Ridge Road was thwarted when the two subjects attempting entry fled in the darkness upon the approach of the residents.

Officer Ceccarelli, observing and approaching a suspicious auto in Springhill Lake, found the two occupants in possession of auto accessories they had just stolen. The subjects were placed under arrest, with subsequent investigation revealing one of the subjects to be an escapee from a State institution, to which he was returned. The other subject was released on personal recognizance.

Two sets of city-placed no parking signs have been stolen from Eastway Road. A local adult resident was observed taking one set, apparently in order to park in the restricted area, and charges have been placed.

The department has investigated and turned over to social services a case of apparent child neglect in Springhill Lake wherein a five year old child is left unsupervised for much of the day.

Mrs. Terry Stockdale, a resident of Parkway Road, has joined the department as a Communications Specialist. She is presently being trained.

Festival Committee Holds Annual Mtg.

by Nancy L. Spong

The Washington area is buzzing with bicentennial activities for this year-long celebration but the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is one event that does not wait for a special year to celebrate in a star spangled fashion. Committee meetings have continued during the past four months dealing with such issues as an evaluation of last year's festival, new program ideas, a budget proposal and nominations for a new festival committee to carry on the traditions and pioneer new programs.

The annual meeting of the Labor Day Festival will be held on Wednesday, January 28 at 8 p.m. in the conference room of the Greenbelt library. All community organizations are encouraged to have a representative present. Individual citizens interested in volunteering to work with the festival are also invited to attend. The agenda will include the adoption of the new budget, discussion and adoption of the new festival policy and election of officers. Nominations will be received from the floor. If you are interested in becoming involved in a community volunteer activity and enjoy the rewards of hard work and fun, the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival has a position just for you. Contact Nancy Spong, 474-7296, for additional information.

CITY NOTES

The general crew corrected the pipe leak from a spring on Orange Court in Lakewood. The crew dug up a section of pipe and found that tree roots had entered the pipe in the yard at 4 Orange Court. The tree roots were removed and the resident informed. The pipe is running free now, although run off into the street is expected until the water absorbed into the hillside drains.

The Reynolds Aluminum Co. recently picked up 99 lbs. of aluminum for the sum of $14.85.

Preparations are under way to resume the paper recycling program the first week of February. Initially the paper will sell for $.60 per 100 lbs. or $12 per ton, but will be subject to fluctuation.

Safety Clinic

The Prince Georges County Red Cross will hold a Small Craft Safety Orientation on Tues., Jan. 27, at 7 p.m., at Bowie State College Pool. This is a prerequisite for canoeing sailing classes scheduled in the spring on Greenbelt Lake.

The orientation will cover such areas as boarding and debarking, changing positions, capsize and self-rescue in a canoe; life jacket use; artificial respiration, simple extension rescues and general small craft safety. To register, call 559-8500, x-45.

HEARING TONIGHT

Greenbelt Gets Chance to Respond To Plans for Roosevelt High School

by Elaine Skolnik

The public hearing on Eleanor Roosevelt Senior High School will start at 7:30 p.m. tonight, January 22, at DuVal Senior High School. Various alternative plans dealing with the Eny resolution and the Magnet School concepts as related to the new school will be presented, as well as the original boundary staff recommendation and the Bowie middle school plan. Public comment will follow.

It is expected that the school board will consider the future of Roosevelt High School at its next board meeting in Upper Marlboro, on Thursday, January 29, from 3 to 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 on (call 627-4145 for more specific time information).

The latest plan drawn up by the board's Task Force was based on a proposal by board members Nicholas Eny and A. James Golato for a dual purpose Roosevelt: one part a comprehensive regular school and the other a technical center. Except for Greenbelt area students in the comprehensive school, there would be no fixed boundaries.

The school board staff, hampered by the lack of solid figures on student interest in a technical school and in open enrollment, estimates a student body of about 1900 students in both schools when Roosevelt opens in September 1976 — 400 coming from fixed attendance area, mostly Greenbelt and the remainder on a "first-come, first-served" basis.

Plan Criticized

This aspect of the plan has drawn sharp criticism from Greenbelt city council, Greenbelt Homes, Inc., the Greenbelt Citizens Committee for Eleanor Roosevelt High School, and some school board members and staff.

The major concern is that open enrollment will draw blocks of students from county high schools to Roosevelt resulting in the tipping of racial balances at those schools and necessitating further shifting of students throughout the county. A similar problem may occur in junior high schools if 9th graders choose to attend Roosevelt.

According to the latest plan, the technical school will start with 9th, 10th, and 11th graders (700) — all on a voluntary basis. The comprehensive portion of the school will start with 400 10th and 11th graders from the fixed boundary areas, with the remainder including 12th graders, coming from everywhere in the county including Greenbelt.

Technical School

Programs envisioned for the technical school include technical graphics, medical lab technology, audio/visual electronics, computer technology programs, science-mathematics specialization, environmental control technology, performing arts, music, drama, dance, legal stenographer, medical stenographer, real estate insurance, fashion merchandising, clothing and textiles, hospitality and entertainment, child development, interior design, floristry, recreation and tourism.

The staff points out that in order to provide facilities for the 1976-77 school year offerings, certain immediate alterations described as minimal, will be required. Additionally they state that "in view of current time restrictions, in-depth study will need to be made early in the 1976-77 school year relative to additional alterations preparatory to program expansion for 1977-78." They cannot estimate costs until complete programs are worked out and they note that the building was not designed for an extensive technical program without additional costs for renovation.

Pros and Cons

An advantage of the technical school concept, according to the school board staff, is that it would appeal to broader interests of students and encourage school attendance. Certain areas of the school are designed for career programs such as home economics, electronics, and visual communications and there would be expanded career education options.

On the other hand, the staff notes that most of the new optional programs have yet to be designed and there is no time to involve business and industry and to pilot new programs. They also cautioned that there is minimal time for staff recruitment, selection, development and orientation involved in a specialized program.

Also noted are the additional transportation costs arising out of an open enrollment policy. Buses will have longer runs, a complicated network of bus routes will be needed, and earlier starting times for the school day may be required.

Inspection of Resale Homes Gets GHI Board Attention

by Miriam Corneliu

Violations of the county electrical code, installation of locks which GHI cannot repair, unauthorized removal of radiators — these are among the problems arising at time of resale, as the board of directors of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. heard at their meeting on Jan. 8. Several new home buyers attended the meeting with complaints which they felt management had not handled to their satisfaction. One seller, Mr. Salinas of Plateau Place, presented a statement of his experience which involved major expense for rewiring a dryer installed years before he purchased the unit he is now selling.

GHI Manager Roy Breashears reported that the stepped-up program of house inspections before resale is revealing violations predating present and even previous, ownerships. He stated that, historically, presale inspections have been limited to a few items — stove and refrigerator in working order, no broken windows, etc. — that did not require a knowledge of the electrical code and other technical matters. He urged the appointment of a fully qualified inspector on a full-time basis.

GHI president James Smith pointed out that if a member-owner, without the knowledge or approval of GHI, installs non-standard plumbing, locks, or wiring, or removes radiators, that member is responsible for restoring the GHI fixtures before selling the unit. On the other hand, the purchaser of a unit should satisfy himself that the fixtures are in compliance with the regulations.

For several years, he recalled, management's proposed budget had included money for increased inspections, but until this year the membership had eliminated this item in order to keep costs down. Now, the corporation must take a hard line, Smith felt, and members must expect to pay at least part of the cost for correcting violations before they sell their homes. This may involve adjusting the fee for inspection, he pointed out, but if the corporation absorbs the cost "it means that we all pay."

On motion of director James Foster, chairman of the finance committee, the board voted to replace missing radiators in the living rooms of two new members who had purchased their homes in good faith. The manager was also directed to install a new GHI lock on the door of a new member where a previous owner had installed a non-standard lock, now broken, which GHI cannot repair.

In the case of Salinas, director Mary Clarke submitted a motion that the electrical problem be corrected, even if this necessitated installing electrical heavy-up for the entire court. Director Virginia Moryadas opposed the motion on the ground that the entire problem of electrical wiring should be considered for GHI as a whole. The motion failed by a vote of 4 to 3. It then appeared, however, that although the seller (Salinas) and the buyer had both signed a contract of sale, the sale had not yet been approved by the board and therefore had not been "consummated" and was still subject to negotiation and even cancellation. The manager was directed to confer further with Salinas with a view to settling the problem by negotiation.

Rental Garage Regulations

Breashears reported that in the course of routine inspections a few instances had been found where a rental garage was not being used to house an operative automobile, as required by the regulations, but only for the storage of lawnmowers, furniture, and other household goods. The board recognized the dilemma. There is a waiting list of car owners in need of a garage and other home owners, especially those in units without attics or basements, in need of additional storage space. The board directed management to continue with its current survey and is continuing its own study of the whole garage and storage question.

And a Few Non-Problems

There were some more cheerful moments during the 3-hour session. A former member, Joseph Compton, was awarded an honorary plaque in recognition of his outstanding services as a member of the board. One of the visitors, Siebert Meade of Hillside Road, surprised the board members by rising to thank them for their help in dealing with parking problems. Norm Weyel reported that his convalescence is progressing and that he hopes to be able to resume attendance at board meetings in the near future. And management's tabulation of 1976 expenditure authorizations, conforming with the approved budget, was passed for first reading without objection.

Greenbelt CARES Needs Tutors

Greenbelt CARES Youth Services Bureau, 22 Ridge Road, needs volunteer tutors. The number of volunteer hours may vary from 1-4 hours per week. Tutoring may be done in the tutor's home, in the student's home or at the Greenbelt library with scheduling arranged by both concerned parties. Tutors are needed for elementary through high school students primarily in math, reading and vocabulary. Anyone interested in helping should contact Nancy Spong at 345-3456 or stop by the office at the Ridge Road Center.

Sign Language Classes

Prince Georges County Public Schools, Adult Education Department is offering a 12-session course in beginning and intermediate sign language used to communicate with the deaf. The registration and first class will be held Thurs., Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m. in the Greenbelt Center Elementary School. There will be a fee.

Garden Club Meets

The Greenbelt Garden Club will be meeting on Monday, January 26, at 8 p.m. in the Greenbelt Library. A short business meeting will precede a talk by Ray Bosmans, University of Maryland Extension Service.

TIM O'KEEFE TO GET EAGLE SCOUT AWARD

On Saturday, January 24, Timothy J. O'Keeffe will receive the Eagle Award from Assistant Scoutmaster William Aleshire at the Mowatt Memorial Methodist Church. He is the newest Eagle Scout to have come from Troop 746 under the leadership of Scoutmaster Al Cousin.

Tim, the son of Dr. & Mrs. David O'Keeffe of 18 Lakeside Drive, began his climb to the pinnacle of scouting in 1969 as a Tenderfoot in Troop 746. His Eagle project on mouth to mouth resuscitation won first prize at the Gaithersburg Fair in 1972. At present O'Keeffe is attending Fordham University in New York City.
